A controversial condo/hotel complex planned for Victoria Shores in Vineland was approved by Lincoln council Dec. 2.

Residents packed the town hall for the meeting to voice objections to the project.

The project, planned for the north end of Victoria Avenue, went through a public meeting July 8. It has since been revised from a proposed height 15-storey plan to 13 and now includes more parking and lower density.

The developer, Globizen Group, is proposing 644 parking spaces, up from 637. Of those spaces, 610 will be on-site and the rest will be on-street parking.

Globizen founder, Brandon Donnelly, said the project also had 30 fewer hotel units and 50 fewer residential units, a result of scaling back the height.

The new project will consist of
